

This past year I decided that I wanted to be a part of the satellite radio revolution. I could not have made a better choice. XM Radio is everything I need and want in a radio. This is a revolution and it is something that threatens National Association of Broadcasters because it is new and it will drain more money out of their pockets. If I have satellite radio, and that is my choice of broadcast, there should be local information provided to me, if that local information is available. Now I can't directly comment on the traffic aspect because I live in rural Mississippi. But, weather is very important. I also have satellite TV. And unlike satellite TV, satellite radio does not black out during a heavy rain. So, if I have no TV, I have no weather report. My point is, just because the NAB is used to having their way in the broadcasting world does not mean that they should have their way forever. Instead of making the new technology conform to old philosophy, make the old philosophy upgrade to the new technology. Just my opinion.
